WWI Centennial Coming to the Virginia Historical Society

Major Exhibitions & Programming Supported by Lead Presenter The Boeing Company

Richmond, VA—The Virginia Historical Society (VHS) will host one of the biggest centennial commemorations of World War I (1914 to 1918). WWI America—the largest traveling exhibition about the Great War—opens on February 17, 2018. Hundreds of original artifacts will be on display. Important personal narratives illustrate the story of the war overseas, and its dramatic impact on the home front. A second exhibition opening the same day, The Commonwealth and the Great War, will highlight the Virginia experience. Through both exhibits, visitors will discover the world-altering impact of the war and how it shaped American culture today. WWI America and The Commonwealth and the Great War are proudly supported by lead presenter The Boeing Company.

WWI AMERICA—WHAT YOU CAN SEE:

- President Woodrow Wilson’s hat and cane
- Magician Harry Houdini’s handcuffs
- Latin American activist José de la Luz Sáenz’s helmet

WHAT YOU MAY REMEMBER, AND CAN LEARN MORE ABOUT:

- The infamous Zimmerman telegram
- Prohibition of alcohol
- Women’s struggle for the right to vote

SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE:

- Interactives explore the variety and quantity of U.S. products shipped overseas
- Recreated movie house showing popular films of the period
- IQ station where guests may take the first-ever written intelligence test given to recruits to select candidates for officer training

THE COMMONWEALTH AND THE GREAT WAR

WHAT YOU CAN SEE: Nearly 100 images and artifacts from VHS collections representing:

- The role of Virginia and Virginians in the war, including major universities like Virginia Tech and Virginia Military Institute
- The origins of many of Virginia's largest military installations
- Articles of clothing like the Red Cross uniform worn by Carrie Triplett Taliaferro Scott of Richmond, and the Naval uniform worn by Walter Alfred Clayton, Jr., of Crewe
